The plant of the All-Steel Motor Car Company, which is being built at Macon, Mo., will be ready for operation early in April. The company plans to put out a touring car, including starter and electric lights, for $425. If present plans are realized, the All-Steel car will be on the market early in August.

Louis Goodhart, formerly traveling representatives of the Lewis Spring and Axle Company, manufacturers of the Hollier Eight, has been appointed sales manager of the All-Steel company.

The company will occupy the plant formerly occupied by the Bles Carriage Company at Macon, Mo., including four buildings and covering a city block 380x300 feet.
